Donald Tiripano is one of Zimbabwean cricket’s stand-out all-rounders, who has played over 70 matches for his country, across all formats.

He has produced glimpses of his ability that has seen him dominate domestic cricket for over a decade.

Batting in the lower-middle order, Tiripano has produced highest scores of 95 (Test) and 55* (ODI), with the latter coming from only 26 balls against Bangladesh.

With the ball, he has career-best figures of 5-63 (v Afghanistan), but arguably his highlight, was defending three runs in the final over against the West Indies, taking three wickets in the process, to earn a heart-stopping tie in November 2016.

Since then, Tiripano has been in and out of the Zimbabwean side, despite his success for his country, and in domestic cricket, with whom he has skippered the Mountaineers in recent years.

He was Logan’s Cup’s best bowler and all-rounder in 2017/18, taking 30 wickets at 21.36 alongside his 678 runs at 75.33. He backed up with the bowling accolade the following season with a further 25 wickets at 15.24 (and 215 runs at 30.71). To prove his all-round ability, in the most recent Logan Cup campaign (2023/24) he finished inside the top 10 run scorers with 426 runs at 42.60.

Tiripano boasts the enviable record of 500 plus domestic wickets and when you factor in nearly 5,500 runs, you have one of the best all-rounders in Zimbabwean cricket.

Whilst he has excelled in red-ball cricket, his style of play is well suited to the shorter formats. An incredibly skilful bowler – he can swing and seam the ball in seamer-friendly conditions and is well-equipped with cutters and a homespun back-of-the-hand slower ball for non-conductive surfaces. With the bat, he has evidenced his explosive power from the lower-middle order for both the Mountaineers and Zimbabwe.

Now seemingly out of favour with Zimbabwean selectors, Tiripano is eager to secure a UK or European gig for the 2025 season. Someone at the top of his game, of note, Tiripano is married to Chipso Mugeru, a regular in the Zimbabwe women's side and, latterly, the national women's captain.
